A Festive Year

Amelia Island 2020: the last “normal” concours

This will be a concours year like no other.

What we know for sure is that the fields will look different. There may be fewer cars.

There won't be hundreds of spectators crowding around each one or pushing up against the awards ramp.

There may be fewer social gatherings on concours weekends.

Yet the magnificence of the machines will still be on full display. Each one will represent thousands of hours of effort by artisans to present a correct, beautiful and brehtaking automobile for you to admire.

Use this guide to plot out the highlights of your concours year.

Then supplement it by finding out where local Cars & Coffee events are held. Those are a great way to practice “car gawking,” the art of just walking around great cars and admiring them.

What will be the same as in years past is the passion of owners and collectors, all of us for whom collector cars are a reason to celebrate, no matter the circumstances. — Keith Martin, Publisher, Sports Car Market ■

Behind the Scenes at Pebble Beach

A judge's blue blazer weighs heavy on the shoulders with the responsibility for evaluating the "best of the best"

by Carl Bomstead

At Pebble Beach, teams of judges circulate among the cars of their assigned class

The Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance is the most prestigious concours in the country, if not the world. On the third Sunday of August, the famed 18th fairway at Pebble Beach — where numerous historic golf events have been decided — is turned over to more than 200 of the world's finest automobiles. They have gone through an arduous selection process. Just to be on the bucolic golf links overlooking the Pacific Ocean and Stillwater Cove is an honor in itself.

In most all cases, restoring a car for Pebble Beach is an expensive and time-consuming process, especially if the car is to be in contention for the prestigious Best of Show award. In selecting the best of the best, teams of three judges circulate among their assigned class. They put the cars through their paces as each one is scored on over 20 specific items.

Best of the judges

These judges hold the fate of the car owner's considerable effort. For insights on how they are selected, we turned to Chief Judge Chris Bock. I asked him how often he is asked how to become a Pebble Beach judge: “Whenever a conversation turns to automobiles!”

He went on to say that he explains the requirements and if the person feels they are qualified, they are invited to submit a résumé. When an opening occurs, candidates are discussed with the chief class judge. A judging team works in close harmony, and there are often intense discussions as the winning cars are determined.

Bock mentioned several key attributes for a judge, including marque knowledge, appropriate judging experience and the ability to work within a team environment. Specific skill sets are also required for the special classes that appear each year.

As the concours looks to the future, younger judges are potentially looked at more favorably. Bock noted that several recent judges were graduates of McPherson College in Kansas, which offers a widely acclaimed automotive restoration program.

The car, not the owner

Newly selected judges, along with many of the experienced judges, attend a judges’ meeting on Friday prior to the concours. This involves the first of many trips up the stairs to the Judges’ Room. Among the items that Bock will mention is that judging at Pebble Beach is not adversarial. In fact, it is the judge’s responsibility to assist the entrants in any way possible.

As an example, if a car is having a problem, the judging team will move on and judge the next car, allowing 20 minutes or so for the issue to hopefully be resolved.

Bock also reminds the judges that they are judging the car, not the owner, regardless of how prominent he or she might be.

It is emphasized that the cars are meant to be driven and minor signs of use are to be ignored. Cars that have completed the Thursday Pebble Beach Tour d'Elegance are awarded a green ribbon, which decides any judging ties. Yes, this has historically been a factor.

Judges need to spend equal time with each of the cars in the class and, of course, thank each participant for bringing their car. Without them, there is no show!

The room where it happens

On Sunday morning, a new judge entering the Judges' Room will be a bit in awe. International designers, journalists, major collectors, automotive industry executives and other luminaries of the automotive world are seated throughout the room. The breadth of automotive knowledge that is represented is most impressive.

After further instruction the teams are sent out with a strict schedule, so there is little time to spare. The cars are started, lights and other components are checked, and flaws noted. Authenticity is a key factor and judges penalize over-restoration. The team compares notes, and any questions are referred to the owner. The benefit of the doubt always goes to the car, but the owner is well advised to have documentation on hand.

Coming to an agreement

The teams again return to the Judges' Room, where the real work begins. The merits of each car are discussed. Judges rank the cars in their class, with flaws noted. This is so there will be documentation in case an entrant inquires as to where his or her car was lacking. The rankings are discussed until all agree on the order, as the final decision must be made by consensus.

The chief class judges and the honorary judges vote for the coveted Best of Show, chosen from the class winners. The selection, from the three receiving the most votes, is announced to great fanfare and a confetti shower.

A judge's long day then comes to a close, an experience to cherish as they eagerly await an invitation to participate in next year's event. ■
